Local bar in violation of city ordinance

Charlotte Smith
Editor

A city ordinance establishing a new closing time for sale of liquor by the drink went into effect last weekend. The 1 a.m. shut down time has been met with some opposition from one local establishment.

"After my on-duty officer noticed approximately 14 cars in the parking lot of C&A Bar and Grill, I went to assist my officer with informing them that they were in violation," stated Hickman Police Chief Tony Grogan.

According to Grogan, approximately 30 people remained in the establishment at 1:25 a.m. Friday night/early Saturday morning. "We informed bar manager Craig McManus, that the ordinance was in effect and they were suppose to stop serving alcohol at 12:30 a.m. and everyone, including employees, had to vacate the establishment no later than 1 a.m." Before leaving Grogan gave McManus a warning.

On Saturday, C&A owner Chris Smith paid a visit to the Hickman Police Department. "He was irate, very vocal, and upset," stated Grogan. "I explained to Chris that we just want to enforce the law."

Knowing that C&A did not comply with the ordinance on Friday night, Grogan determined it was necessary for him to

Bumper to Bumper buys Gannon buildings

Charlotte Smith
Editor

"Good news indeed," stated Fulton County Judge/Executive David Gallagher. "It's great that a new business is coming to Hickman." Gallagher was referring to the news that Bumper to Bumper Auto Parts will be opening in Hickman soon.

"We are excited about a new business coming here and taking over an old established business," stated Mayor David Lattus. "We are happy that it didn't take a company long to establish a business here and they see a future. That is encouraging to our entire community."

The certified parts store is part of one of the largest auto parts distribution networks in the world. Last week they purchased the two former Gannon's Hardware buildings located on the 1099 ByPass.

Plans are to begin renovations as quickly as possible. "We want to add an enclosed breezeway linking the two buildings together," stated Steve Korte of Distributors Warehouse Inc., owner of the new business. After remodeling, the new Bumper to Bumper store will be over 6000 sq. ft.

"We hope to be set up and in business no later than the end of February," added Korte. "Sooner if possible."

The auto parts store is a good fit for Hickman. Bumper to Bumper will also carry a line of hardware items to go along with the extensive inventory of automotive parts, supplies, accessories and tools.

"It will be a dual operation store. Just like our store located in Chandler, Indiana," Korte explained. "It is very successful and we are looking forward to doing that here in this location." Bumper to Bumper's hardware supplies will come from the same distributor that supplied Gannon's with their products. The Gannons (Jack and Helen) retired in September 2012, after 40 years in the hardware business in Hickman.

Bumper to Bumper Auto Parts is not new to this area. They have had a location in Fulton for approximately eight years now, and the new Hickman store will become the 20th corporate store location of Distributors Warehouse Inc. in Paducah. The Fulton location is located on West Highland Drive, relocating from a smaller location to that storefront about three years ago. Bumper to Bumper stores are located across North America, with member companies in Canada, Mexico, and the United States. Distributors Warehouse's Bumper to Bumper affiliation extends to over 50 other shareholders selling automotive products with 140 distribution centers, 2,300 parts stores, and 2,900 certified service centers.

"I am confident the business people here, plumbers, farmers, the detention center and City public works will utilize this business," added Mayor Lattus. "It will save us a lot of money in fuel and we can once again purchase items needed locally. I encourage the citizens of Hickman to patronize the business and make them feel welcome. We certainly do as a city. We will be there to assist them and help them in any way we possibly can."

"A much needed void will be filled for

MVP Group could bring 150 jobs to Fulton County

The Fulton Leader

According to the Kentucky Cabinet for Economic Development website, Financial Incentives Data Base, MVP Group International, Inc. was given preliminary approval on Jan. 31 for maximum tax incentive authorized at $2,000,000, and project cost listed as $5,249,400, to locate in Fulton County.

MVP Group International, Inc. is listed in Bloomberg Business Report as a South Carolina based company, founded in 1998, which manufactures, designs and markets private label and branded candles and home fragrances.

A telephone call was made by The Fulton Leader, to the Charleston, S.C. company, and a representative of the company recommended The Leader contact MVP Group, and speak with Jeanna Tucker or Chris Hendrick, at MVP Group located at 112 Industrial Drive in Mayfield.

The individual who answered the telephone at the Mayfield location said both were in a meeting and not available.

A voicemail message was left for Tucker, and no return call was received as of press time.

Celebrating Black History Month with Sunday hats at Johnson Chapel Church

In accordance with 1 Corinthians 11:5, per Paul's instruction, women who were praying or prophesying were asked to cover their heads. Failure to cover their heads would be the same as if they had shaved their heads, which was considered shameful at that time. This has led to a long history of women wearing various head coverings in church, including hats.

School back in session, flu still hanging around

After Fulton County schools were shut down for four days last week, students were back in class on Monday, Feb. 4. "We started out the day with about 91% attendance and with a few students reporting late, we ended the day with a 92.5% attendance rating," stated Superintendent Dennis Bledsoe. "We had 11 students out at the high school level for various reasons and 30 students out at the elementary level with most reporting getting over the flu and feeling bad."

Some were still going to the doctor and four were sent home on Monday that arrived at the school with a fever and feeling ill. Supt. Bledsoe hoped to maintain a constant 90% attendance level during the week.

A representative from Parkway Regional Hospital and Hickman Family Medical Clinic reports, "We are seeing flu cases in both the hospital and clinic. There has been a spike in flu cases in the past month." Seventy percent of those they are treating in the hospital are those with the flu. In some cases, people who were vaccinated still tested positive for the flu. They've seen lots of flu cases involving school-aged children. There have been 75+ cases at the clinic.

During a weather briefing held on Friday, Jan. 18 CDC Director Tom Frieden described the influenza season as a particularly bad one, especially for those age 65 and older, because the predominant strain is H3N2. Here in Fulton County it has hit school aged children and those who work closely with them.

In the state of Kentucky, more than 90 percent of the deaths have been seniors and the hospital rate for seniors with confirmed flu cases was up sharply during the previous week to 82 per 100,000.

Pediatric deaths increased by 9 during that same week, bringing the total to 29. Forty-eight states reported widespread influenza activity.

Justice Cunningham stops in Hickman during his 2013 River County Tour

Charlotte Smith
Editor

Justice Bill Cunningham was in Hickman last week for his annual 2013 River County Tour which also included stops in Hickman, Carlisle and Ballard counties. Before making his way to the Fulton County Courthouse and the Fulton County Office Building, Justice Cunningham spent a little time at the McDonald's in Fulton, which is located within a couple of miles of the Kentucky/Tennessee state line.

A couple of weeks ago, Justice Cunningham was a guest speaker at the Clinton Rotary Club meeting and gave an informative presentation on the similarities and some facts about the two states that border each other for 343 miles. He noted that both Fulton and Hickman counties are two of the Kentucky counties that border the Volunteer state.

"Seventeen Kentucky counties border the state of Tennessee," he added. "It is only about a mile wide, but Hickman County is a border county." Eleven of those counties are in Justice Cunningham's district, including New Madrid Bend all the way over to Scottsville.

Tennessee is Kentucky's longest neighbor. "It is the only neighbor not divided by some natural barrier," he added. "All the other neighboring states are divided by rivers or mountains." He likened it to the two states sharing a "fence roll."

"One thing that we share in common is the history of dueling," noted Justice Cunningham. He brought up that the current swearing in ceremony includes information about "swearing" to never have been involved in a duel or even assisting in one.

"We also share three major rivers, the Mississippi, the Cumberland and the Tennessee," he noted. "Land Between the Lakes is also shared between the states and it consists of two Kentucky counties and one Tennessee county."

Fort Campbell's military installation is in Kentucky and Tennessee. "The formation of Fort Campbell in Kentucky and Tennessee a circle or an oval and it was suppose to be the exact same amount of real estate in both states," Justice Cunningham said. "Some land investors from Tennessee went in there and were going to make a bunch of money out of it so they kind of finagled them out of it." Thus resulting in not a perfect shape. Fort Campbell was named after the last wig governor from the state of Tennessee, Union Army Brigadier General William Bowen Campbell.

The Appalachian Mountain chain is also shared by the two neighboring states to the east. "When traveling those mountains you never know when you are in one state or the other," he commented.

"Like good neighbors we share a cup of sugar or a stick of butter," said Justice Cunningham. "A very interesting swap between Governor Ned Breathitt (1963-1967) from Kentucky and Buford Ellington (1959-63) and 1967-71) from Tennessee has impacted the states to this day. Tennessee was wanting to build this I-40 bridge in Memphis and they didn't have the money. The two governors got together and made a swap with federal money while diverting the route of I-24, entering Kentucky in Christian County."

He also touched on State Line Road, which happens to straddle the state line between the two states. He remembers buying fireworks in Tennessee because they were illegal to purchase in Kentucky. "If it looked like we were going to get caught, we just drove back over to the Tennessee side," he said with a chuckle.

The New Madrid Earthquake was the last item he talked about that is shared by the Bluegrass State and the Volunteer State.

Did you know? Those of us who were born before 1940... were born before TV, penicillin, polio shots, frozen foods, Xerox, contact lenses, videos and the pill. We were before radar, credit cards, split atoms, laser beams and ballpoint pens, before dishwashers, tumble driers, electric blankets, air conditioners, drip-dry clothes... and before man walked on the moon. We were before day care centers, group homes and disposable diapers. We never heard of FM radio, tape decks, artificial hearts, word processors, or young men wearing earrings. For us "time sharing" meant togetherness, a "chip" was a piece of wood or fried potato, "hardware" meant nuts and bolts, and "software" wasn't a word. We who were born before 1940 must be a hardy bunch when you think of the way in which the world has changed and the adjustments we have had to make. No wonder there is a generation gap today!

Kentucky's Circuit Clerk's Offices launch new organ donor heart on license

You can now add a symbol that stands for hope and generosity on something you carry with you everywhere: your driver's license. Like Indiana, Ohio and several other states, Kentuckians now have the option to have an organ donor heart printed on their license.

"For more than 20 years, the Circuit Clerks of Kentucky have been educating communities about the life-saving mission of organ donation. Thousands of kids and adults are waiting for an organ transplant today. Now, Kentuckians can proudly show their support for these patients in need," explains Calloway County Circuit Court Clerk and Trust For Life President, Linda Avery.

When renewing a license, deputy clerks ask all Kentuckians if they would like to be a registered organ donor. Everyone who says, "Yes" will have the option to have a small, blue heart with the words "Organ Donor" printed on his or her license. The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet has worked hand in hand with the Kentucky Circuit Court Clerks and the Trust For Life to get the heart symbol added to driver's license and ID cards.

"This is an important advancement in Kentucky. The organ donor heart will emphasize that it's not about signing the back of your license anymore. It's about saying 'Yes' and joining the Kentucky Organ Donor Registry," explained Shelley Snyder, Executive Director of the Kentucky Circuit Court Clerks' Trust For Life.

Each day 18 patients die waiting for a life-saving organ transplant. Every 10 minutes a new name is added to the waiting list. Only 35 percent of Kentuckians are registered organ donors.

Kentucky updated its driver's license in 2012, improving security and adding new features such as a ghost image to reduce fraud capability and the veteran designation for honorably discharged military personnel. The organ donor designation is the last part of the driver's license makeover.

Those wishing to add the blue heart to their license prior to their driver's license renewal time can purchase a duplicate license at their Circuit Clerk's office for $12. The cost involved is for the license renewal or follow up on Saturday night to see if Smith’s bar manager McManus was following the law.

“Around 1:02 a.m. approximately seven people were still in the bar and were leaving the premises,” Grogan said. Grogan, Hickman Officer Phillip Burnett and a representative from the Sheriff’s Office went on the property at

1:08 a.m. and management was still inside. “I informed them that this was an improvement over the night before, but they were still not in compliance and I had to cite them.”

According to the ordinance, which ran in the Courier on January 31, anyone found in violation shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars ($100) nor more than two hundred dollars ($200) or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than six months or both for the first offense. Larger fines and more jail time are assessed with each subsequent violation.

“I will leave it up to my officers on duty this weekend to check and see if they are in compliance with the ordinance,” added Grogan. “We need everyone to follow the law.”

Hats

The women of Johnson Chapel chose Sunday, Feb. 3 to show their respect to God while adding some pizzazz to their presence by wearing their hats with their Sunday best outfits. Some of the “mothers of the church” and others including Pastor Steven Turner’s wife, Thelma Turner, Sister Jean Green, Idella Turner, and Lillie Mae Cheirs all wore white, which is a custom on the first Sunday of the month.

Sunday’s event kicked off Black History month with the women of the church reminding everyone of the tradition of looking your best from head to toe, which is just as important to going to church.

The act of covering your head during worship has its roots in scripture and in Biblical times, women were expected to wear veils all of the time, especially when they were in church. If a woman did not cover her head, she was considered disgraced.

Then during the Middle Ages, between Biblical times and the 19th century, women in the church continued to follow the proclamation of Paul in his letter to the Corinthians. Women wore head coverings in church and throughout the rest of their days in public. These coverings ranged from veils to caps and came in a variety of styles.

With the dawning of the 19th century, some churches decided that head coverings were no longer required of women. Other churches decided to switch from the veils and caps of earlier years to bonnets instead. The fashionable bonnets became a way for middle and upper-class women to show off their status in the church, which was far different from the original purpose of women wearing a head covering in church.

During the earlier half of the 20th century, women, especially the wealthy, moved from bonnets to fancy hats. These hats also were meant to show off the social status of a woman and were more of a reflection of habit and fashion than religion.

Around the middle of the 20th century, women in church would often forgo wearing a hat at all. By this time, the original religious meaning of women wearing a hat in church had been long forgotten. The fashion statement the hats made were no longer required as a social status symbol. Women and men in the late 20th century had more equal status. Some churches, though do still have women who wear hats, especially southern churches that have higher numbers of African-American members. For some, going to church is an opportunity to see all the hats in addition to a religious experience.

Today, it is most often the older women who dress elaborately on Sunday mornings. It is imperative for many African-American women to look their grandest when going before God. For many of these women and their ancestors, dressing up for church was one of the few opportunities they had to remove domestic aprons and housedresses. These drab garments were replaced by bright colors, fancy shoes and elaborate hats, which would stand out in a crowd on Sundays. Style and sophistication ruled the day.

Editor’s Note: We will be featuring African-American women from Johnson Chapel in their hats all month long in celebration of Black History month. Next week we will focus on the eight commandments of hat wearing.

Whitesell’s coverage of Hickman and the Civil War continues

May - After the Battle of Shiloh in April, the Union Army occupied West Kentucky and Tennessee, but Confederate cavalry units continued to roam at will in the area. On May 5, a bivouac of Federal cavalry, some 125 men in three companies of the 5th Iowa cavalry, were overrun by a much larger force of Confederate cavalry at Lockridge’s Mill in nearby Weakley County, Tenn. What was left of the Federal common initially headed for Hickman. Missing the Hickman road, they continued northward toward Paducah. The command was reported to have lost 6 killed, 16 wounded and 67 taken prisoner. There is considerable evidence that throughout the same period, there were always people from Forrest’s command, circulating in the Kentucky Purchase, as in other adjacent Federally occupied areas, on recruiting missions seeking horses and supplies, or pursuing other missions.

17 October - The Federal garrison on Island #10 was attacked by a Rebel guerrilla force of 300 men. The guerrillas moved under the light of the harvest moon, through the swamps and back roads of Madrid Bend in Fulton County, and were forming for assault when a suspicious Union sentinel fired a warning shot. The ever present threat to the success of any night attack, confusion, instantly resulted in the Confederate ranks.

Yankee resistance crystallized, and the Rebel attackers were forced to retire. There were casualties on both sides. The leading of the raiding force was Col. W. W. Faulkner who would later raise a regiment of Confederate Partisan Rangers, the 12th Kentucky Cavalry. This regiment would be built around the nucleus of many of the men who participated in this abortive Island #10 operation. Most of the men were front he Purchase area. Once formally organized (early in 1863), the regiment would be initially referred to as derisively as the “Kentucky Gorillers” because most of its members had been engaged until that time almost constantly in operations behind Union lines. Another participant in this raid was Capt. Henry A. Tyler of Hickman. He would become a company commander in the 12th Cavalry, and eventually emerge as one of General Nathan Bedford Forrest’s most trusted officers, when the 12th came under Forrest’s command in 1864. Capt. Typer would have a reputation of competence as well as having very vicious fighting qualities.

23 December - Union City, Tenn., fell to Gen. Forrest’s Cavalry which had driven into West Tennessee recruiting men, killing Yankees, and seizing supplies. One the night of the 23rd, an officer and forty men were sent north to Moscow in Hickman County. They moved through Fulton County, and on Christmas Eve, drove out the Federal detachment guarding Moscow. The railroads trestles, bridging the Bayou de Chien, were destroyed.

February - Federal Brig. Gen. Asboth, commanding the District of Columbus, complained that bands of Rebel irregulars infested the country along the M&O Railroad south of Columbus in West Kentucky and Tennessee. He also fretted about attacks on river traffic. He surmised that the guerrillas derived

Sports In Kentucky

For the Hickman Courier

By Bob Watkins

Glass half full.

In aftermath of an NFL season made tiresome by a media herd enthralled with Tom Brady, Peyton Manning, and latest bulletin on Michael Vick’s knee, fans got a Super Bowl worth the price of a television commercial (almost).

But more, the MVP headed to Disney World owns a name straight out of casting for Godfather IV. Flacco, Joseph Vincent.

From Audubon, New Jersey, Flacco broke quarterback records for the Fighting Blue Hens at University of Delaware. Then he paid his earn-your-spurs dues in the NFL for a decade.

All grown up and gritty, Joe Flacco is symbol for Kentucky fans who believe in “hey, the glass is half full!”

Example why Kentucky football fans ought take heart again as verbal commits become another freshmen class of hopefuls in Lexington this week. Not that long ago experts said Joe Flacco was a three-star high school prospect. Not the nation’s 39th best prospect, but 39th on the best quarterbacks list.

When Kentucky football fanatics sit down to examine backgrounds of UK’s commits this week and see that 13 are three-star types, remember Flacco.

With coaching and patience and good work in class, any or all can rise to become another Joe Flacco.

America, I love this place.

UK PANIC BUTTON OFF?

First, while the no-NCAA-for-Kentucky-this-year doom-sayers clutch their RPI Ratings sheets as evidence, John Calipari’s team turned a road trip into a pair of sparking wins last week.

As we turned to February, if Kentucky pushes to 17-6 by the weekend, fans need only ask themselves a question “are there really 65 teams in college hoops better than ours?”

Kentucky wobbled at times

last week, but two wins at home this week would move the Wildcats within three (with eight to go) of the school’s 23rd 20-win seasons in last 24 years.

Last week was a demonstration of what Kentucky fans adore, a team becoming one, becoming educated too, and improving.

The Wildcats win at Ole Miss was pass-the-hostile-crowd poise test, and more. Fans got to see step-up-time.

The win at Texas A&M gave coaches another teaching video - This one on how to NOT play last five minutes of a game when an opponent down eight points, does not surrender.

More ...

- To say Nerlens Noel was dominant would be to waste words. UK’s very long freshman can’t shoot like his predecessor from floor or foul line, but he is starting to hang around for longer spans of time in the Anthony Davis orbit.
- Kyle Wiltjer was stereotyped as lead-foot stand-and-pop shooter. Wrong. I see dramatic add-on his game, Dan Issel qualities. Rebounds tougher, passes clever, does lovely post work using his feet, and shows leadership signs.
- Julius Mays. Whoever convinced the Wright State senior to sign on at Kentucky should take a bow and get a bonus. All expenses paid trip to Disney World?
- Ryan Harrow. Still a shaky decision-maker. When teevee talking heads gushed too frequently over Calipari’s Point Guard Inc. these days, sentences with Derrick Rose, John Wall and Brandon Knight don’t include Harrow.

Irony? It will surprise nobody if Harrow is sitting next to Jon Hood next season.

- Alex Poythress needs to get more shots, Jimmy Dykes stammered as the freshman forward took three at Texas A&M. A more concise analysis would be: Poythress needs to create and earn more shots.

- Ominous sign: A team forced to send its best player to the bench at free throw shooting crunch time.

HARPER & THE FICKLES

When we look for definition of fickle sports fan here in Kentucky we need look no further than Bowling Green. Amazing, how quickly a (vocal few?) Hilltopper fans have turned on coach Ray Harper.

Has WKU faithful become Topper Fickle? Harper not only took over a fractured team last mid-season and got it to believe play on toes instead of heels, his team won a Sun Belt title and played two games in the NCAA Tournament.

One can reasonably conclude, maybe the prime reason football coach Willie Taggart left his alma mater was WKU’s Faithful gone Fickle.

BEER MUSCLES?

Kentucky coach John Calipari sent some of us to the dictionary last week when he dropped the term “beer muscles” into conversation.

Beer muscles: noun, false bravado; Dutch courage; the powers one imagines one has after one has consumed 19 pints of beer.

Dutch courage? Alcohol induced self-confidence.

Example: “To line up at quarterback and look across the line and see Ray Lewis, I need some Dutch Courage.”

WORTH REPEATING DEPT.

Jon Hood plays seldom at Kentucky, but the kid from Madisonville is quite an analytical observer. Comparing ex-teammate Anthony Davis and Nerlens Noel, Hood told the Lexington Herald-Leader, “Anthony would just run in the lane with you and jump with you and hang there.

“Nerlens gives you a window and makes you think there’s a shot there. Because you think you have a shot at it and then here comes the flat top.”

And so it goes.

Exploring the Great Outdoors in Kentucky

By Cory Ramsey

The Appalachian Trail is full of characters. Not hikers, characters. Each year, thousands of hopefuls attempt to thru-hike the whole thing from Georgia to Maine, and only one in four actually make it all the way. To do that, they have to trudge along most every day from March until October, up to 20 miles per day in heat, insects, rain, snow, and wildlife, all with a kitchen sink or more on their back the whole time. Hurtful as that picture is, it’s still on many a bucket list, including my own. I’ve only set foot on a foot of it near the Clingman’s Dome in the Smokies. Maybe one day I’ll add a foot or two more.

Back to the characters. To start, everyone uses a “trail name.” Some wild description of who they are or who they think they’d want to become. Some names are even given by others after the first couple of weeks and finding out what kind of hiker they have on their hands. Whiners and shiners, fit and floppy, good, bad, and ugly, all trying to get to the end of the thing. Follow the trail to the core, and you’re known as a “White Blazer.” Fudge a little here and there with short-cuts, and you’ll be termed a “Blue Blazer.” Hitch-hike your way to Maine, and be labeled a “Yellow Blazer.” White blazers hate the other two types, but everyone dislikes the few that spend the entire seven months and 2200 miles chasing tail rather than the trail. Those characters carry the name “Pink Blazer.” No joke.

Could you imagine, ladies, being approached on trail by a sweat soaked, unwashed, unshaven, wiry, long-haired, stinky breathed hiker asking for a number to a phone that you probably didn’t pack in the first place? And who would want to kiss in a trail shelter? Twenty or so tired, sweaty, stinky hikers packed together like sardines, snoring and more while mice nibble at exposed digits (it happens). I’ll pass.

Hikers lose their toenails on the AT within the first couple months, a product of the constant walking. There goes that pedicure you wanted to surprise her with. At least you’d have a candle-lit dinner, albeit macaroni and cheese (or Pop-Tarts) every...single...night.

I’ve tried to mix romance and hiking on the trail, but it never quite turns out as planned. For one, you see this pretty little thing all decked out in her store-bought hiker’s outfit and forget all manner of wilderness observation. Entire hiking trips banished from my memory banks because I spent the bulk of the time looking at her, and I always allowed the lady to proceed first, with all due respect. Keep your eyes on the trail, sir.

Lord help if I ever got around to kissing her! That was it. What else had I done that day? I can’t even name the location where I had hiked! Just a puckered up set of lips, the taste of gloss, and shoulders held tight. That’s it. I’ve had first dates on trails and last dates on trails, first kisses and last attempts. Promises made, and promises lost. The common thread always being the woods. Thank God for the woods. I can always count on the woods being the same, day after day, year after year. As for a girl, I can always count on her being different, day after day, year after year. No wonder the Bible says “It’s better to live in the wilderness than to live with a contentious and irritable woman.”

Happy Valentine’s Day, and by all means, don’t mix your woods and your woos together. Trust me, I speak from experience (if I could remember any of it...).

- A word to the congregation of West Baptist Church in Hickman. “Joy cometh.” You all are held in thoughts and prayers here in Bowling Green. A long road ahead, but a time of closeness that you never knew you had. Godspeed on your rebuild.

The district match up between the Jr. Lady Pilots and the Jr. Lady Comets on Tuesday, Jan. 29 proved that the ladies from Fulton County were fierce competitors able to come through down the stretch. The number three seeded team, Jr. Lady Pilots, faced an up hill battle when they put the ladies from Carlisle County at the free throw line mid-way through the first half. Fortunately for the Jr. Lady Pilots, the ladies in white and maroon had problems connecting from the charity stripe, hitting only 11 of 35 in the game.

Down by four at the start of the second half the Jr. Lady Pilots came out scoring on buckets by eighth graders Leah Weatherly and Leslie Beth Jackson to tie the game at 14 all. Jackson would score the final basket of the game with seven seconds left to give her team the lead and the win, 25-23. Jackson had five of her nine points in the second half.

Tough defense was played on both ends of the quarter. At the end of the first six minutes the game was knotted up at 4 a piece. Jr. Lady Pilots Jackson and Alana Coffey provided the scoring.

In the second quarter Weatherly and Jackson would put the ball through the hoop for the Jr. Lady Pilots keeping them close. The Jr. Lady Comets would attempt 10 free throws making only four, giving them the four point lead (12-14).

After Weatherly and Jackson's buckets tied the game at 14 all early in the third quarter, the Jr. Lady Comets would again have trouble at the charity stripe, scoring only five points in the quarter. The Jr. Lady Pilots scored a total of six points in the quarter when Weatherly scored again with 29:2 seconds left in the quarter, pulling her team within three (16-19).

Jr. Lady Pilot Kylira Williams, would score her first points of the game and the Lady Pilots were within one. Two missed free throws by the Jr. Lady Comets and one made by Giles for the Lady Jr. Pilots would tie the game at 19 all with 4:38 left to play.

Down the stretch missed free throws by the Jr. Lady Comets and missed shots by the Jr. Lady Pilots kept the game tied until Jackson would make one of two from the free throw line giving her team their first lead of the game, 20-19.

Four more missed free throws by the Jr. Lady Comets and a bucket by Detyja Giles would put the Jr. Lady Pilots up by three with 2:37 left to play in the contest.

A quick bucket by the Jr. Lady Comets and one of two from the free throw line Jr. Lady Pilot Williams would tie the game at 22 all with just over a minute left in the game.

The Jr. Lady Comets would go one for six from the free line tying the game and providing the Jr. Lady Pilots the opportunity to win the game.

On a break away Jackson would travel down the court and lay it in the hoop with just seven seconds remaining. The Jr. Lady Comets would move down the court quickly, but lost the ball. After fouling to stop the clock, and two missed free throws by Jr. Lady Pilots #1, the Jr. Lady Comets again lost the ball and ran out of time. The Jr. Lady Pilots earned their way into the championship game on Thursday night, Jan. 31 facing with the 25-23 victory.

Jr. Lady Pilots are first district runner's up

Charlotte Smith
Editor

After coming from behind to defeat the Jr. Lady Comets in the first round of the first district middle school tournament on Tuesday night, the Lady Jr. Pilots knew they needed to come out strong against the Jr. Lady Falcons. The ladies in blue and gold fell to the favored ladies in black and twice during both regular season match ups.

On Thursday night, Jan. 31 in a packed gym at Fulton City the Jr. Lady Pilots pulled out in front for the early led with 4:21 to go in the game on a basket from behind the arc by Leslie Beth Jackson.

The Jr. Lady Falcons responded quickly with two buckets by Sarah Gardner to go ahead 7-10 with 2:24 left in the half.

Play was stopped to discuss a where it was thought the free throw shooter for the Jr. Lady Falcons had a one-a-one situation, with that being the case a put back bucket counted, putting Hickman County on top now 7-12.

Leah Weatherly was there under the basket to score for the Jr. Lady Pilots with 37:2 seconds to go in the half, pulling her team within six. After another Jr. Lady Falcon bucket, Detyja Giles connected for the Jr. Lady Pilots to keep them within six points of the lead. They went into the locker room down 11-

17. Weatherly would end a six-point Jr. Lady Falcon run with two more of her game high eight points, but the Jr. Lady Pilots now trailed by 10.

The Fulton County crowd was large and kept cheering on their Jr. Lady Pilots who hadn't been to the "dance" in four years.

They fought valiantly all the way through the third quarter with Jackson connecting on two free throws and Wilira Williams adding a bucket. A shot before the buzzer by Weatherly gave the Jr. Lady Pilots 19 points.

With six minutes left to play the Jr. Lady Pilots had 13 points to make up.

Back-to-back buckets by Alana Coffey and Weatherly gave the Jr. Lady Pilots hope, now down by only nine with 4:11 to go in the game.

The Jr. Lady Pilots were out-scored in those final four minutes nine to two, falling 25-41 in the championship game.

The Jr. Lady Pilots finished the season as the 2013 First District Middle School Runners Up.

Leading scorer on the night was Weatherly with 8, followed by Jackson with seven. Also scoring were Warren, Giles, Williams, and Coffey, with two a piece.

Eighth grade night will be held on Thursday, Feb. 7.

District Runner's Up Jr. Pilots fall to Fulton City in championship game

Charlotte Smith
Charles Choate

For the second year in a row, the Fulton County Jr. Pilots basketball team came within one game of capturing the First District Middle School Championship.

Last Thursday night, with a gymnasium full of fans divided between Fulton County and Fulton City, the Jr. Pilots tried to work some magic to defeat the team they lost to twice this year.

But again, the outcome would be the same, as the Bulldogs mounted a fourth quarter comeback to complete the season trifecta on their home floor, winning the District title 45-34.

Fulton County found themselves trailing for most of the night in the game.

Coach James Bridges' team played from behind in the first two quarters, but managed to close the deficit to one point at the halftime intermission, as the Pilots made a late 7-3 scoring run.

After falling behind by nine points early in the third quarter, Fulton County turned the tide and the momentum of the game with baskets from Dre Smith, Davis Major and a 3-point shot by DJ Virgin.

Bridges' team finally took their first lead of the game, with 3:39 in the period, when Davis Major sank two shots from the charity stripe.

Two Taylor Sipes free throws again put the Jr. Pilots in front, with 2:14 in the third.

But it was the final period of play that sank Fulton County's chance at capturing the District crown.

Winning 30-26 to start the fourth quarter, Pilots fans could only watch as Fulton City mounted a 19-4 scoring advantage, guiding the Bulldogs to the first place trophy.

Davis Major led Fulton County in the game with 16 points, while D.J. Virgin added 8. Also on the night, Dre Smith had 4, with Nataven Bransford, Jake Russell and Taylor Sipes finishing with 2 points each.

"I am very proud of the boys this year and all that we have accomplished," stated Coach Bridges. "Thanks for the fan support all year long."

Fulton County 39 Hickman County 35 - Opening Game

Fulton County advanced to the championship of the First District Middle School Tournament with a tough come-from-behind win over Hickman County.

The Jr. Pilots trailed at the end of the first three periods, but managed to take the lead in the fourth quarter en-route to their 39-35 win.

Coach James Bridges' team trailed 10-4 at the end of the first quarter, and 18-12 at halftime, before the Jr. Falcons opened up their biggest advantage, 25-15, late in the third quarter.

It was not until Davis Major connected on two free throws with 3:52 in the fourth quarter, that Fulton County tied the game at 31-31.

Taylor Sipes finally put the Pilots in front 33-32 from the free throw line, before a Jake Russell putback gave Fulton County a 39-35 cushion with :46 to play.

Davis Major led Fulton County with 18 points, 15 of those in the second half.

Dre Smith had 10 points, Jake Russell 9 and Taylor Sipes 2.

Hickman County was led by Lane Branham with 11 points.

Flu

have been reported, there should be enough to go around with 145 million doses having been prepared by manufacturers but only 129 million have been distributed, according to FDA Commissioner Margaret Hamburg. "We still have flu shots available at both health departments in Hickman and Fulton," stated Dawna Fields last week. "Despite the expanded vaccination recommendations, many children remain insufficiently vaccinated."

Although influenza vaccination coverage among hospitalized children six months to <5 years was higher in 2004-2009 than in earlier years, complete vaccination remained less than 50%. Only in the clinic population did full vaccination coverage increase significantly. On all the enrolled children, less than 45% of children older than six months determined not to have influenza were fully vaccinated against influenza.

The study further stipulates that season influenza remains an important cause of hospitalizations, emergency department visits, and outpatient visits among children.

The CDC also stated, in a WPSD Local 6 website article, that the influenza season is expected to last into March.

To schedule an appointment to receive a vaccination for the flu, call the Hickman office at 236-2825 or the Fulton office at 472-1982.

The Fulton County Sheriff's Office (FCSO) was notified on Wednesday, Jan. 30 at 10:14 a.m. about a vehicle that was submerged in the river off Sutton Road in the lower bottom area. A passing towboat had seen the vehicle and called the Ohio Valley Coast Guard on the river radio who in turn called Hickman Police Department who notified the FCSO. Officers responded to the area and found the vehicle in a very remote part of the county a few miles from the Tennessee State Line in the river. It appeared to officers that the vehicle had been stripped and intentionally put into the river. Once the vehicle was removed from the river it was obvious due to all doors,

The vehicle is described as a late 1980's Chevrolet Suburban, two-wheel drive with cab lights on the top. The vehicle is light blue and silver in color and had a bumper sticker on the back indicating MY CHILD IS AN HONOR STUDENT AT DYERSBURG SCHOOL.

The case is still under investigation and anyone with any information on the vehicle is asked to call the FCSO at (270) 236-2545. All information will be kept confidential.

Fulton County Sheriff's Office (FCSO) was notified of a single vehicle accident early Sunday morning, Feb. 3, on Ky. 116 just out of Fulton city limits. Capra, refused medical help. Mr. Capra appeared to be impaired to the officers on the scene and when questioned about this he did agree he had been drinking. Mr. Capra was arrested and charged with Operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, drugs, etc. .08 (agg. circum) 1st off. and Careless Driving.
